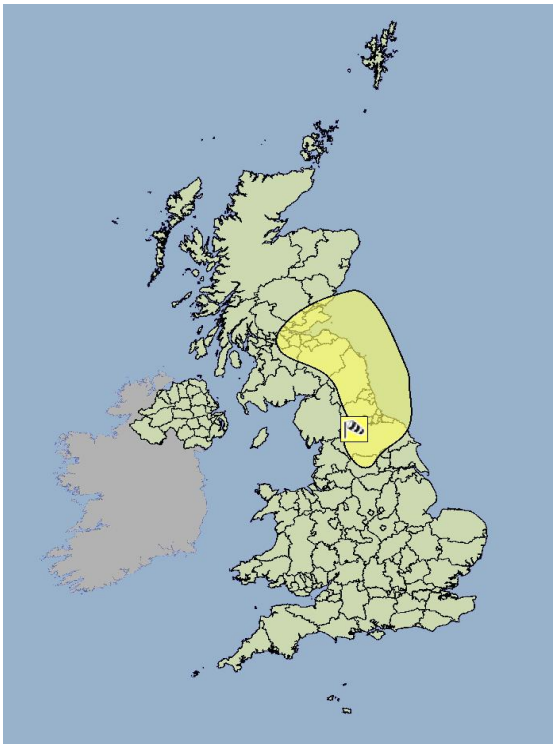
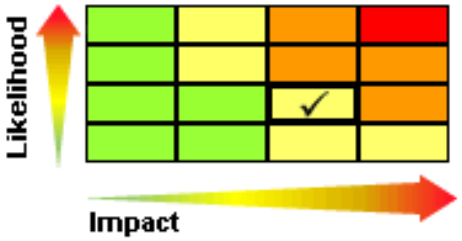
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Very strong winds are forecast to continue to affect some parts of the UK during Tuesday. Southwesterly winds are most likely to gust between 50 and 60 mph across much of the warning area with the potential for gusts of 70 mph over the far southeast of Scotland and parts of northeast England. The strongest winds are likely during the morning's busy travel period before gradually easing.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 06:00 on Tue, 17th Oct 2017 until 15:00 on Tue, 17th Oct 2017

A spell of very windy weather is likely on Tuesday in association with ex-Ophelia.

Road, rail, air and ferry services might be affected, with longer journeys times likely, and some roads and bridges could close. Power cuts may occur, with the potential to affect other services, such as mobile phone coverage. Some damage to buildings, such as tiles blown from roofs, could happen.

The warning area has reduced to take this out of Northern Ireland, southwest Scotland, northwest England and northwest Wales as winds are easing here.
